

Workshop: How to Publish in an International Nutrition Journal

Sunday 25 August 2019

FANUS Conference: Lemigo Hotel, KG 624 St, Kigali, Rwanda

The purpose of the workshop is to support and empower African scientists to prepare scientific publications for international Nutrition journals

Learning outcomes

After participation in the workshop the delegates will be able to:

- formulate a title for their manuscript
- prepare a scientific paper according to the guidelines of an international Nutrition journal
- present the research in a clear logical way to an international readership
- present the results in text, tables and figures
- point out the novelty of the research findings and address limitations
- cite and reference appropriate literature in the various sections of the manuscript
- prepare an abstract for the manuscript
- select an appropriate journal for submission of the manuscript
- prepare a cover letter to accompany the manuscript submission
- display scientific integrity and adhere to ethical standards for publication
- address reviewers' comments and revise a manuscript after review
- respond to rejection of a paper
- interact with policy makers based on publication recommendations.

Who is this workshop for?

The workshop will be useful for postgraduate Nutrition or Health Science students, early career scientists, or senior scientists who plan to submit scientific papers to international journals. The workshop provides a useful opportunity for participants to learn from one another when experiences are shared.
